

COURSE AUDIT

POLICY

Auditing a course allows an individual the opportunity to participate in a learning experience without the expectation of completing course requirements (assignments, exams, etc.). However, as course assignments and exams enhance learning, students auditing a course are encouraged to complete all course requirements. Students auditing a course are expected to attend regularly and participate in class activities. Students are also expected to observe all college policies and requirements. A student may only audit a course in which all prerequisites have been met. A student who successfully audits a course will receive the grade of "AU," which does not contribute to the GPA or enrollment hours for the purposes of full-time study and financial aid.

Students are required to pay regular tuition for a course audit, with the following exceptions:

1. Students currently enrolled in the D.C. program may audit a course previously taken at the college or in which advanced placement was granted by the college at no charge.
2. Individuals graduating from Sherman College requiring certification of postgraduate classroom attendance to obtain a license, qualify to retake national boards, or to renew a lapsed license will be allowed to audit classes at no cost. The college will provide the individual with a letter certifying completion of a specific number of in-class hours.

Students must register for audit courses. A grade of "AU" will be recorded for satisfactory completion. Once registered to audit a course, the student may not change from audit to credit status or vice versa, unless the change is made within the scheduled drop/add period.

The college reserves the right to decline an audit registration if the class registration is full.
